MR. BRYAN IN NEW HAVEN.

Wm. J. Bryan was the guest of honor yesterday at a banquet in Warner Hall, New Haven, Conn., at which about 150 democrats were present. Gov. Garvin, of Rhode Island, and Congressman De Armond, of Missouri, were among the guests from other States. The occasion took the form of a celebration of Jackson Day and was also declared by some of its promoters to be intended as a sort of prelude to the opening of the presidential campaign in New England. W. H. H. Hewitt was toastmaster. Mr. Bryan's topic was "A Conscience Campaign."

He said in part:

"The word 'campaign' suggests warfare. It is good tactics to strike the enemy where he is weakest and to use the weapons which are most effective. The weak point of every bad policy is that it sacrifices human rights to selfish interests and to-day to prove a system evil we only have to show that it violates a sense of justice that is satisfied with nothing less than equal rights to all and special privileges to none. The only appeal that is permanent in its effectiveness and endearing in its usefulness is the appeal to conscience, and while it may seem weakness to the brutal and folly to the sordid, it arouses a response that is at least irresistible. If we would touch the conscience of others we must give evidence that our conscience have been quickened. The great issue at this time is the issue between man and mammon—between plutocracy and democracy. All surface questions of policy of taxation and of regulation and of finance are but phases of that century-long, that world wide struggle between the common people and organized wealth. To say that it does not pay for a nation to violate the rights of the people of another nation involves so much of addition, subtraction, multiplication, and division, that many get lost in a maze of mathematics. But to say that the wages of sin is death is to give an epitome of history that accords with each person's experience. In dealing with the trusts, with finance, with labor problems, and with all the other questions at issue, we must view them from a moral standpoint and refrain every evil at the bar of the public conscience. 'Will it win? Nothing else will give permanent success. As the martyrs, who, eighteen hundred years ago kneeling in prayer while hungry beasts devoured them, invoked a power mightier than the legions of Rome, to-day the same, it is not only possible but necessary to appeal to that moral sentiment which, when aroused, will prove more potent than the purse."

Mr. Bryan left at midnight for Washington.

FLOGGED PRINCESS.

Rostend Pasha, formerly the Turkish Ambassador at London, relates the following sensational episode in the life of the late Princess Mathilde, with whom he was on terms of close friendship: Prince Andoto Demidoff, her husband, was the son of a manufacturer of arms, who amassed an enormous fortune. When the Princess promised to marry the Count he had her beautiful hand clasped in his own carved in marble, with the inscription, "Forever." Soon after the marriage the Princess decided that she could not endure the cruel treatment of her Russian husband. She was exceedingly popular in St. Petersburg society, but her husband held her aloof from it, using every means to prevent her seeing the Czar. One winter night when Demidoff was very certain, for good reasons, that the Princess would not follow, he went to a court ball in the winter palace. The reception and presentation were just over and the dancing was about to begin when the Princess unaccompanied and unattended, entered the ballroom in a magnificent toilet, all her jewels about her graceful person. She walked majestically up to the Czar, at whose feet she knelt. Then withdrawing the lace scarf that covered her bare shoulders and bowing her head low she displayed her white back streaked all over with blooded marks left by her husband's whip, and with uplifted hands begged the Czar to rid her of the man who had thus treated her. No wonder the Czar (Nicholas I) granted her a legal separation, ordering Demidoff to make her a yearly allowance of $50,000. The Princess afterward went to Paris to live.

CRAZED BY LOVE.

Lucretia Vallotti, a daughter of sunny Florence, 18 years old and beautiful, was a model of propriety as well as a model for the artists of Mount Parnasse, in Paris. So beautifully proportioned was the girl that no other model was necessary for any part. Her figure was perfect for the ensemble, while the outlines of her foot were as lovely as those of her bust. Artists were mannikins to Lucretia until she met Gaston Miramon. Him she loved from the first time she posed for him. Gaston proposed marriage, but Lucretia's mother refused permission, fearing she would lose the revenue from her daughter's posing. Gaston brooded, and finally absented himself for three months. From the day of his funeral Lucretia never was seen to smile, and she was strangely silent.

ONE NIGHT LAST WEEK HER MOTHER AWOKE

in inexplicable terror and saw her child standing over her with an up-lifted dagger and heard her say: "Awake mother, whose cupid killed my lover; mother who trod on my happiness, who sacrificed me to her selfishness. Awake and I look death in the face." Hearing these words and seeing the dagger about to descend, the mother caught her daughter's wrist, and after a desperate struggle, disarmed the child, who had gone stark mad. Deprived of the dagger Lucretia seized the aged woman by the throat, and only the arrival of neighbors saved her from being choked to death. Lucretia has been taken to an asylum. She still thinks she is a model and poses for the other patients. The mother is in a hospital.

Domestic Troubles.

It is exceptional to find a family where there are no domestic ruptures occasionally, but these can be lessened by having Dr. King's New Life Pills around. What's In a Name?

Everything is in the name when it comes to Witch Hazel Salve. E. C. DeWitt & Co., of Chicago, discovered some years ago how to make a salve from Witch Hazel that is a specific for Piles. For blind, bleeding, itching and protruding Piles, eczema, cuts, burns, bruises, and all skin diseases DeWitt's Salve has no equal. This has given rise to numerous worthless counterfeits. Ask for DeWitt's—the genuine. Sold by all druggists.

MISS FAY LEE,

President of the Shakespearean Club, Kansas City.

"Your booklet came to my home like a message of health when I had suffered with headache, backache and bearing-down pains. I was weak, nervous and hysterical and had not consulted any doctor, thinking it would pass away in time, but instead I found that the pains increased and were more frequent. I decided to try Wine of Cardui and in a short time was much improved. It seemed to act like a charm. I kept up the treatment and the result was most satisfactory. Words fail to express my gratitude for the suffering that is now saved me. I am in fine health, physically and mentally. I can only say 'thank you', but there is much more in my heart for you."

A million suffering women have found relief in Wine of Cardui.
